Raj Ghat	Old Delhi	Digambar		Gurudwara Sis Ganj Sahib	Akshardham Temple

🕌 Raj Ghat is the memorial of Mahatma Gandhi, the Father of the Nation. A black stone platform in an open-air complex marks the spot there Ghandi was cremated. A flame constantly burns at one ends of the platform. (Visitors are required to remove their footwear before they enter Raj Ghat) Also close to the Raj Ghat is the memorial of Jawaharlal Nehru, known as Shantivan.

🕌 Digambar is a Jain Temple, it is one of the two major schools of Jainism. It means sky-clad.

🕌 Gurudwara Sis Ganj Sahib was constructed in 1783 to commemorate the martyrdom of the ninth sikh guru.

🕌 Akshardham Temple brilliantly showcases the essence of India's ancient architecture, tradition and timeless spiritual messages. Stay and watch Sahaj Anand Multimedia Water Show which aims to introduce audience to India's ancient wisdom.

	Jama Masjid		Qutub Minar	Lotus Temple

🕌 Jama Masjid is one of the largest mosques in India. It was completed in 1656 by Mughal Emperor, Shah Jahan.

🕌 Qutub Minar was built in 1199 by Qutub-ud-Din. The sultan's successor and son-in-law, Iltutmish, completed it. The purpose of building is unclear. Some believe that it was built as a tower of victory, signifying the beginning of Muslim rule in India, while others say it served as a minaret to the adjoining mosque.

🕌 Lotus Temple is surrounded by a landscaped garden and is a symbol of peace. This is the Asian headquarters of the Bahai faith, and a circular temple that is open to all.
